TO MECCA: A group of elderly Iraqi pilgrims pray outside of their plane in Baghdad before heading to Mecca in Saudi Arabia for their pilgrimage. Saudi Interior Minister Prince Nayef bin Abdel Aziz confirmed that elderly and sick pilgrims from Iraq traveled to Saudi in violation of the U.N. air embargo, imposed in 1990.

Iraqi trip violates U.N. sanctions

By TRAVIS MURDOCK

U.N. sanctions Wednesday by flying a plane load of elderly Muslims to Saudi Arabia to fulfill their once-in-a-lifetime pilgrimage to Mecca.

Saddam Hussein followed Libya's Moammar Gadhafi by sending followers to Mecca by plane. The pilgrims' departure was reported on Iraqi television.

The United Nations faces a difficult problem in ending the ban on air travel — the plane carried elderly people trying to fulfill a religious obligation.

Link if they are only pilgrims on the plane to Mecca, said Sulaf Alzubi, a Muslim student from Jordan. "The problem with the sanctions is they don't hurt the leadership of the country," she said.

Believes the United Nations has the right to be concerned about the military in Iraq, but she believes the two sides would work out a non-political solution to the conflict.

House Press Secretary Mike McCurry said in an Associated Press story Wednesday that the administration respects the wishes of people of Muslim faith. At the same time, Iraq violated U.N. sanctions and the "U.N. should ... review this matter."

"I am against keeping the embargoes because they hurt the wrong people. The governments of Libya and Iraq are still standing. Iraqis and Libyans are normal, loving people and it is too bad they are victims of their government," Alzubi said.

Citizens in the areas surrounding Iraq are more familiar with the problems the sanctions cause to the common person because they see the plight of the refugees, Alzubi said. They see the refugees crossing the borders in need of food and medical care.

"The women and children are the first to be hurt," Alzubi said.

The pilgrimage to Mecca is one of the five pillars of Islam or one of the five requirements each Muslim should fulfill during his or her life.

"When they go to Mecca, all their sins are erased by doing the pilgrimage rights," said Taher Al-Ahwal, Muslim student from Yemen and computer science major at Utah Valley State College.

"Being a Muslim, no one likes someone to put pressure on them. It is none of my business to judge the (U.S. government), but personally it is not right. They have put sanctions on Iraq for a long time and they should rescind the order," Al-Ahwal said.

"In Islam there are five pillars of Islam that distinguishes it from other monotheistic religions. Mecca is like going to the temple for members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints," Alzubi said.

While at Mecca, Muslims perform sacred rites to re-enact the life of Mohammed, Islam's founder, and to strengthen their faith.

"It is a ritual, and at the same time it is a cleansing time spiritually. It is a symbol of unity and a place to meet other Muslims from around the world," Alzubi said. "The trip to Mecca is a lifetime achievement."

Muslims prefer to make the pilgrimage to Mecca later in their life so they can prepare for the experience.

"Right now, I am not spiritually prepared and mature enough to go to Mecca — you will come back a different person spiritually," Alzubi said.

Missionary shot in Buenos Aires

ORIN VORHEIS

Elder Orin Voorheis, 20, a missionary for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints from Pleasant Grove serving in the Argentina Buenos Aires South Mission, was shot in the head Wednesday during an attempted robbery. He is in critical condition.

The victim's mother, Florence Voorheis, said Elder Voorheis and his companion were returning to their apartment around 9:30 p.m. Argentina time when they were stopped by three assailants.

Arnold Augustin, director of media relations for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said the three attackers, who were armed with a knife and a gun, demanded the missionaries' money. After finding the missionaries had little money they could steal, one of the assailants shot Elder Voorheis in the head. The two elders were a block from their apartment.

The attackers fled. Elder Voorheis' companion, Elder Armando J. Berry, 20, of Cleveland, ran down the street to a phone and called an ambulance and the police.

Louis Cowley, first counselor in the bishopric of Elder Voorheis' home ward, said the injured missionary is in a modern hospital. He said the doctors were trained in the United States and no one should be concerned about the care Elder Voorheis is receiving.

SLC School Board ends bus contract

By MATT SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

The Salt Lake City School Board voted this week to terminate the Tran Spec Busing, Inc. contract that was supposed to save the district $600,000.

Last year the board was deciding whether to hire Tran Spec to take over the transportation responsibilities for the entire district.

Now after a year of late buses, expensive field trips, and many complaints from the community, the board voted to not renew the contract.

In addition to its poor service, Tran Spec recently asked for an extra $160,000 to finish the school year. Tran Spec spokesman Don Winters said they needed the money just to break even.

Gary Harmer, district business manager, was central in hiring Tran Spec last year. Harmer is now responsible for reclaiming the service and implementing it again in the district.

Harmer had recommended that board members extend the company's contract because taking back the bus service would be too complicated and time consuming.

Harmer and his staff will inspect the buses and equipment that were sold to Tran Spec to assess a buy-back price for the entire fleet. He also said he has to interview and hire about 70 employees, most of which are currently on Tran Spec's payroll.

Harmer said he will try to make the transition as smooth as possible, but it will take some time.

District officials are hoping that Tran Spec will fulfill their contract which expires on July 31. Harmer said Tran Spec has been cooperative.

After the decision to end the contract, Tran Spec President Randy Bennett said he would try to have the district with transportation before July 31.

Now the district must decide what to do with $300,000 they allocated for district Internet connections, special education programs and enhanced elementary school music programs.

crashed 35 miles east of Provo, Wyo., Thursday morning involving several civil engineering students.

Gupta, a senior from Thailand, majoring in civil engineering, was one of two females seriously injured.

"I was shaking, I couldn't breathe," Gupta said.

"The van hit the median and skidded until it slipped onto its side and created a huge wave of snow," he said.

"There was a lot of smoke coming out of the bottom of the van," Ploeger said. Ploeger stopped his van so he and his passengers could help the other students.

"Everyone was really calm inside the van," Ploeger said.

The passengers in the van behind the one that wrecked helped to extinguish what they thought was a fire, while the others tried to get the people out, Ploeger said.

The only exit, at first, was the driver's side door. One student was eventually able to force the back doors open.

Brett Borup, associate professor for civil and environmental engineering, was in the front van.

"I didn't even see it happen," Borup said in a telephone interview.

"I don't think the decision has been made final yet, but it sounds like we'll head back," Borup said. "There are a lot of students that have put a lot of effort into their projects, so it'll be up to everybody as to what we will recover on the same patch of ice that caused the other van to crash.

"After I got out of my skid, I looked in my rear view mirror to see how the other van handled the ice, and it was perpendicular to the road," Ploeger said.

The entire group returned to Provo around 8 p.m. Thursday after renting two additional cars to replace the wrecked van.

The injuries in their accident were more serious because their vehicle rolled.

New program speeds deportation process

By RYAN GEORGE
Universe Staff Writer

The Immigration and Naturalization Service and the Salt Lake 3rd District Court are cooperating with each other on a new program that will hasten the deportation of illegal aliens convicted of drug dealing.

The coordinated federal and state effort is in response to dramatic increases in drug trafficking by illegal aliens in Salt Lake City, where 85 to 90 percent of the drug-related arrests are illegal aliens, said a Salt Lake Police Department official.

The program also imposes strict penalties on illegal aliens convicted of felonies or class A misdemeanors who choose to re-enter the United States, requiring the average offender to serve five to six years in a federal penitentiary.

The deportations are intended to free up much needed jail space in the Salt Lake area, allowing law enforcement officials to keep drug offenders in jail long enough to go through the judiciary process as opposed to being released after 24 hours under the Federal Consent Decree, which prevents jail overcrowding.

"Basically, they've been getting off scot-free because of our jail situation," said Captain Roger Winkler of the Salt Lake Police Department.

The jail system in Salt Lake has been described as a revolving door, where those people arrested and jailed for non-violent crimes, like drug dealing, are allowed to go free under the Federal Consent Decree, without serving as much as a full day in jail. After their release, the criminals often return to the streets to continue their illegal activities.

"These criminals know the system. And every time we arrest them they have a different name," Winkler said.

Under one of the deportation programs, called stipulated deportation, an illegal alien brought up on felony drug charges may plead guilty to a Class A misdemeanor instead. The felon is then offered stipulated deportation from Salt Lake City directly to Mexico in exchange for waiving a right to a deportation hearing, which takes place in Denver.

The previous program required all illegal aliens to be transported to Denver for a deportation hearing.

Another program, called expedited deportation, allows illegal aliens already convicted of felony drug charges to be expedited without requiring a deportation hearing in Denver.

"It speeds up the whole entire process," said Wayne Kirkpatrick, INS supervisory special agent. "Felonies will only be in Salt Lake for three weeks and then they will go straight to Mexico."

3 die in Minnesota school bus crash

MONTICELLO, Minn. — A school bus and a large truck collided at an intersection Thursday, killing two pupils and the truck driver and injuring around 10 other children, authorities said.

A Monticello School District bus was carrying about 12 elementary school pupils when it was struck about 8:10 a.m., said Don Lindell, chief deputy for the Wright County sheriff's department.

The empty gravel truck pulled into an intersection marked by a stop sign in its direction, the sheriff's office said. The bus, which did not have a stop sign, hit the truck's cab on the passenger side.

One pupil and the truck driver died at the scene, said Roger Oberg, a spokesman for Monticello-Big Lake Community Hospital. The sheriff's department said a second pupil died, but had no details on where.

"The bus had the right of way," said sheriff's Capt. Gary Miller. "There's a failure to yield."

Miller said he did not know if the truck stopped at the stop sign before proceeding into the intersection at two county roads just west of Monticello. The town is about 35 miles northwest of Minneapolis.

Approval rating highest for Albright

WASHINGTON — Watch out, Bill, Al, Newt and Trent.

Less than three months in the job, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright got the highest approval rating in a survey of 1,206 respondents by the Pew Research Center. The results were released Thursday.

Two-thirds of those surveyed gave Albright a favorable rating, with only 14 percent unfavorable. She received high marks from men and women, Republicans and Democrats, low- and high-income groups.

Albright's approval rating tops President Clinton's 61 percent and Vice President Al Gore's 57 percent.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott is faring much better than House Speaker Newt Gingrich, with a 57 percent approval rating compared with Gingrich's 28 percent.

Bonneville to buy 3 radio stations

SALT LAKE CITY — Bonneville International Corp. intends to purchase three radio stations from Evergreen Media for $205 million, the company announced Thursday.

The stations include WLUP-FM and WPNT-FM, both in Chicago, and KDFC-FM in San Francisco.

"This purchase is among Bonneville's most significant to date," said Bruce T. Reese, Bonneville president and chief executive officer. "Our continued effort to build holdings in the top-10 markets took a major leap today with the addition of three stations in two prominent cities."

Bonneville already owns one station in Chicago, WTMX-FM, and two stations in San Francisco, KOIT-FM and KOIT-AM. It also signed an agreement in March to buy KPIX-FM in San Francisco from CBS radio.

In all, Bonneville operates 14 radio and television stations and six communication support companies.

Strike hinders Chrysler production

DETROIT — Chrysler Corp. said it will halt production of its highly profitable Jeep Grand Cherokee, Dodge Ram pickup and two other truck models Friday because of a strike at an engine plant.

About 1,800 members of the United Auto Workers went on strike Thursday at the Mound Road plant in Detroit after negotiators failed to reach agreement on a new local contract.

Because the strike cuts off the supply of engines, Chrysler said it will shut down four assembly plants in the United States and Canada employing 12,080 workers.

The walkout came on the same day that the No. 3 U.S. automaker reported a record first-quarter profit of $1.03 billion, a 2 percent gain over the first three months of 1996.

Chrysler has been the most profitable of the Big Three automakers, largely because it produces far more trucks than cars.

Utah project attempts to combine students

By MATT SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

All means all. This should be our attitude when dealing with our children in education, according to Tim McConnell, director of Utah's Project for Inclusion.

UPI began in 1989 as a five-year federally funded Systems Change Project through the Utah State Office of Education. The original purpose of UPI was to assist school districts that were interested in integrating students with severe disabilities into less restrictive environments. The project emphasized policy revision, attitude change and social integration.

When UPI began, it tried to assist school districts to help get students who had been previously segregated, because of a disability label, back into the flow of general education classrooms within their neighborhood schools.

What began six years ago as an issue about students with severe disabilities has just recently evolved into an issue of diversity that impacts all students and schools.

McConnell said that as they began to work intensively with individual schools and school districts they noticed a pattern of feedback.

Segregation, meeting student needs, functional curriculum, establishing networks and developing relationships were not limited as issues for students with severe disabilities, but issues that impacted many students in a typical classroom.

"We have come to understand that 'inclusion' is not a disability issue or a diversity issue. Typically, when schools are creative in dealing with students with the most intense needs, they are more likely to meet all student needs," McConnell said.

in the INS, allowing Salt Lake agents to bypass the Denver deportation hearing, have largely been the result of pressure put on the Department of Justice by Utah Senators Orrin Hatch and Bob Bennett. The senators were also instrumental in getting more funding and more staffing for the INS in Utah.

"Utah is experiencing a growing problem with criminal illegal aliens, a problem some in Washington have failed to realize is not limited to border states," Hatch said.

Cooperation between the Salt Lake 3rd District Court and the INS occurred after Associate Presiding Judge Robin Reese and Judge Dennis Fuchs approached the INS to see if there was a way they could improve the criminal justice situation through cooperation.

The new program gives the defendant an incentive to plead guilty a little sooner, Reese said. As a result, they can be deported sooner as well, creating more space in the jails for other offenders, Reese said.

As part of the judicial process, the arrested illegal aliens are fully advised of their rights by the Legal Defender's Association, a court appointed defense for people who cannot afford legal counsel.

The legal defenders fully explain the plea bargain option available, the right to waive the deportation hearing and the consequences of returning to the United States after being convicted of a drug offense.

"Our experience has been that most clients have elected to take the plea and get out of jail so that they can go home sooner," said John Hill, director of the Legal Defender's Association.

Since the start of the new program in March, 63 illegal aliens have been arrested for drug-related crimes. Of those 63 persons, 32 were first-time offenders who agreed on the plea bargain to lower the charges to a Class A misdemeanor, which would allow them stipulated deportation, Winkler said.

arranged for the family to fly to Argentina to be with Elder Voorheis, including stopping in San Francisco to obtain passports immediately. He said the family is uncertain if they will accept the offer.

Elder Voorheis was constantly cheerful, Cowley said. He was energetic and watched for opportunities to serve others.

In a letter to his family, Elder Voorheis wrote, "What makes me very happy is seeing all the people that do Florence said President Oveson, mission president in the Buenos Aires South Mission, told her Elder Voorheis and his companion obeyed all of the mission rules. Elder Voorheis was in the 11th month of his mission.

Elder Voorheis' father, Wayne Voorheis, is the manager of telephone service at BYU.

Florence said the Voorheis family would appreciate anyone including Elder Voorheis in their prayers.

Preparation essential for pioneer trek

By SHAWN DICKERSON
Universe Staff Writer

"Let all the people of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints be organized into companies, with a covenant and promise to keep all the commandments and statutes of the Lord our God."

These words, from the second verse of the 136th section of the Doctrine and Covenants, outline the early commitment of the saints to organize themselves and make their way across the plains as efficiently as possible.

Because the journey was guided by revelation, strict guidelines were laid down for any family that decided to go west. Only by heeding these guidelines were the saints allowed to cross the plains with the body of the church.

In some cases, willing saints had to postpone their journey in order to bring their preparation into accordance with the commands of the Lord.

Such was the case for Aroet Lucious Hale.

Baptized a member of the church in June 1834, Aroet was eager to cross the plains with the earliest companies of saints. As this excerpt from his journal describes, however, he was counseled to first make all the appointed preparations and then to make his journey. His journal reads:

"President Brigham Young and the apostles commenced to organize the camps by appointing captains of hundreds and fifties. The captains were directed to organize their respective companies. This was about Jan. 16, 1847. I attended the meetings and heard the counsel that was given to the saints. None was to start with less than the required amount of bread stuff: one cow to two persons, seed grain, seed potatoes and a good outfit for one year. I knew that I could not go in 1847. I had not more than one-half the required amount of bread stuff, less one yoke of oxen, less seed grain and a great many other things that were required to make outfit. I saw that I had to go to my counselor and advisor as I had agreed to do, President Heber C. Kimball. I told him I had attended the meetings. I had heard the counsel that was given to the saints. I told him that I was one yoke of oxen less, about one-half the amount of bread stuff less, and no seed grain. Said he, 'Aroet, there are a great many that will have to stop until another year, some of my family, some of President Young's family will have to stop. We have established a farm, each for portions of our families and friends that wish to join us. My farm is six miles up the river and President Young's is twelve miles up the river. There is a track of land there that you can raise a good crop of corn, squashes and potatoes and other vegetables. Be industrious. Raise all you can and next year you shall go to the mountains with me.'

"Uncle Henry Harriman had not the required amount and he concluded to go to the Kimball farm. A great many that had not the required amount recrossed the river and took up land and farmed. Their headquarters was Kensville. I joined with Uncle Harriman. We worked together and raised a good crop of corn and vegetables. During the fall and winter I made several trips down into Missouri, worked and peddled some things that we could do without, such as ironware, shovel and tongs, hand irons, flatirons and heavy cooking utensils, which lightened up our load and helped make our outfit.

"Tuesday, May 9, 1848, 22 wagons, the first of the season, left

Winter Quarters for the valley. The first week in June, President Young broke camp at Elkhorn and started for the Great Salt Lake Valley with a company consisting of 662 souls and 226 wagons. I was organized into Heber C. Kimball company, first fifty, Henry Harrison, captain of first fifty. My outfit consisted of two yoke of oxen and one yoke of cows on the heavy wagon.

"The family was as follows: 1. Aroet was the oldest. I had charge of the family; I was in my 20th year. My sister Rachel, in her 16th (written above the line: 19th) year. My brother Alma, in his 12th year. My brother Solomon in his 9th year. I was appointed one of the hunters for the first 50 hours. Eastman was my hunting companion. Buffalo and antelope were very plentiful and common up the Platte River. We had good luck and supplied our division with what buffalo meat they needed while we were in the buffalo country."

Parent Room opened at UVRMC

By JILL GUEST
Universe Staff Writer

Ronald McDonald greeted children and adults at Utah Valley Regional Medical Center in the opening celebration of the Ronald McDonald Parent Room Wednesday.

This room was designed for parents with children in the newborn intensive care nursery. The Parent to Parent organization introduced the idea of constructing a room for parents that would allow them to deal with their feelings and difficulties in a private and comforting way — a sort of "safe haven."

"There is such a great need. It is the most critical time of life. It is vital that a person feels comfort and has a place to go for information and to share feelings and gain support. Parents can pull down the bed or recline a chair and still be near their child in case of an emergency," said Dennis and Janet Hall, owners and operators of the Provo Ronald McDonald's room.

The Hall's initial interest in the room stemmed from their own experience concerning their son's premature birth nine years ago. Because of their memories and gratitude, they were instrumental in obtaining the $15,000 grant from the Ronald McDonald Children's Charities of the Intermountain Area.

The grant funded and equipped the room with items that would be helpful to parents including a sleeper sofa, glider rocker, wall decorations and cabinets. A computer, printer, fax machine, microwave, refrigerator, TV, VCR, video recorder, tape recorder and a library of educational materials, directed to the parents of intensive care infants, are also available for parents and loved ones.

The Design Group of Provo donated time, talent, money and effort to the interior design of the parent room to accommodate the wishes of the parents and reconstruct it into a multi-purpose facility.

"It is an unusual experience for people. They think they will have a Gerber baby, that nothing will go wrong. When a child is born and there are complications, parents experience several feelings, including guilt and anger. Our long-term goal is to foster empowerment for parents, to take care of their babies and offer the availability of comfort to them," said Dr. Stephen Minton, a neu-perinatologist and director of newborn services at UVRMC.

Having a place that is comfortable and still accessible to their baby will grant a sense of empowerment, Minton said.

Michele Doman, director of fundraising for Parent to Parent of Utah County, spent the first four months of her daughter's intensive care experience not in a room, but in a hospital closet, where she would sleep.

"One of our goals is to make a room, not a closet," Doman said. "We are giving back in a way we never thought was possible. Out of the smallest things come miracles."

Parent to Parent is a support organization for parents who have had an unexpected pregnancy outcome. It is run by volunteer parents who have had similar experiences. Without their help, the parent room wouldn't exist, Minton said.

"This is the classic example of parents recognizing the need and accomplishing it. Parents are taking the initiative," Minton said.

UVRMC is also working on a family guest house for patients suffering from several ailments, like cancer or a stroke. The house will offer an economical residence for the patients. The ground breaking for the new house will be in the fall.

"$1.2 million out of $1.6 million has been raised, so completion of the project is not far off," said Bonnie Pence, associate director of the Central Utah Health Foundation.

A newly commissioned sacred work by BYU music professor K. Newell Dayley will be performed by Ricks College musicians in the Marriott Center Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

"Immanuel" is the fourth in a series of works commissioned by Ricks College. Dayley said that Ricks College first approached him three years ago, and the work was formally commissioned last year.

"The topic and content were left up to me. It just had to be based on the sacred text," Dayley said.

The performers include 90 members of the Ricks College Symphony Orchestra and 150 singers who belong to Collegiate Singers and Concert Chorale. They will be led by R. Kevin Call of the Ricks College music faculty.

"They have a fine music program at Ricks," Dayley said. "The faculty feels like they have a mission and they have high (musical) standards."

"Immanuel makes me think a lot more about my life and how I am living it," Thomas Bhock, a member of the Symphony Orchestra, said. "It will give me a greater appreciation for the Atonement and help me understand (the Savior's) role in the plan of salvation."

The hour-long composition is divided into 12 movements centered on the life and mission of Jesus Christ.

Dayley said the most difficult part of composing "Immanuel" was selecting

K. NEWELL DAYLEY

"First of all, we have a lot of scriptures. (In this type of a piece) composers frequently juxtapose things that don't go together doctrinally. I have tried to create a consistent doctrinal thread through this piece," Dayley said.

The second challenge is to make the music fit the text. "The music must take on a form that has a consistent style and voice. You can't just tie a bunch of pieces together," Dayley said.

"Finally, the music and text must fit together."

Dayley said that by combining the text of the scriptures with music, spiritual learning is accelerated.

"Many times when we read the scriptures we do not understand. When we hear them put to music, we feel them. Elder Packer said that you learn a lot faster when you combine the feeling and learning process together," and he was inspired by it, Dayley said.

Dayley said the pattern for works like "Immanuel" goes back to the Baroque era and Bach's cantatas and Handel's oratorios, which were large-scale pieces based on a religious theme.

Dayley is well known for his hymns "Lord I Would Follow Thee" and "I Feel My Savior's Love."

Commenting on what he felt people should take away from the performance, Dayley said, "(First) I would hope profound appreciation for the Atonement, second a greater appreciation for who Christ really was, and third a greater hope in your destiny."

CAEDM crashes; causes student woes

By KIMBER KAY
Universe Staff Writer

Everything came to a crashing halt in the Engineering Department Tuesday night as the Computer Aided Engineering Design and Manufacturing network went down.

CAEDM is the network for the College of Engineering and is the best student system at BYU, second only to the computer science network, said Greg Fastabend, a senior in electronic engineering technology (EET), from Milani, Hawaii.

"This is the worst possible time for the system to go down," Fastabend said. "With the end of the semester only days away and final projects looming ahead, engineering students are in a bind."

"There goes the semester," said Kyle Symons, a senior EET student, from Sacramento. Symons said he lost two months worth of work when the system crashed because most of his research was on the Net.

The system failure did not affect all systems, just the I and G drives. The I drive contains engineering students' word processing files and the G drive holds all e-mail files and Internet bookmarks.

"It shouldn't have happened if the system was configured properly," said Josh Kapp, a senior EET from Provo. He said CAEDM should have backed up their files every week, but said he doesn't think it been done for months.

"We don't know the extent of data lost," said Brian McLCAEDM systems operator. "I would like to encourage people to keep multiple copies because no system is safe." He said restoring the 12 bytes of lost data will take at least hours.

Students disagree about the priority of saving all files onto disk. Some projects are too big to store on disk or are too impractical because there are several people working on one project, Symons said.

Fastabend said files since February this year have been lost. McLear said there is no way to tell how much has been lost. He said the system should be up this morning.

Professor Max Raisor of Mechanical Engineering Department said that he hopes students will be able to finish their projects on Raisor extended his deadline for projects by two days. Some of Raisor's students have been concerned about getting their projects done, but he said if they are patient things will work out.

Banquet to bring world hunger to BYU

WORLD HUNGER: Radiant Futures for Children, a non-profit group established to house and care for abandoned children in southern Mexico, will benefit from tonight's Hunger Banquet in Amanda Knight Hall.

Hunger Banquet 1997, presented by Students for International Development, will be held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today in the Amanda Knight Hall.

It is "a dining experience that brings world hunger to the BYU campus," according to the flier for the event.

The annual Hunger Banquet is targeted at raising funds for organizations throughout the world that are involved in projects that aid the needy.

Of the participants in this event, 10 percent will be arbitrarily selected to eat a gourmet meal similar to those in developed countries.

Sixty percent will be served a meal consisting of beans and tortillas, frequently eaten in the least-developed countries. The remaining 30 percent will eat a meal representative of those in Second World countries, according to a press release from SID.

This year, the proceeds will be given to Radiant Futures for Children, a non-profit organization established to house and care for orphaned children in Chiapas, Mexico. Gloria Call, president and founder of the organization, will be the guest speaker at the event.

"Last year, we raised $1,600," said Matthew Wood, a senior from American Fork majoring in Asian studies and international development and co-coordinator of SID.

Over the long run, SID hopes to work more directly with the organization to "develop a meaningful relationship," Wood said. This could be done through sending interns to Chiapas to work and conduct field studies.

One problem Wood noted was the difficulty in getting donations from restaurants this year. Wood felt the American population currently is either moving toward activism or heading toward apathy.

Tickets are available in 204 and 273 HRCB and at the door. The costs are $5 for students and $7 for others.

Obscene Phone Calls

A resident of Deseret Towers reported April 4 that she received two "lewd and annoying" phone calls from a male who used Spanish vulgarities.

Vandalism

A vehicle parked by Helaman Halls was found with shaving cream sprayed on all of its windows April 4. The suspect vehicle, a brown jeep with California license plates, was seen in the area shortly after the vandalism occurred. Anyone with information regarding this case is encouraged to call Investigator Aaron Rhoades at 378-5215.

On Wednesday a disabled student parked her vehicle in an A zone area on the east side of the Clyde Building after finding all of the disabled parking stalls occupied. When she returned to her car two hours later she found that someone had punctured the right front tire. Anyone with knowledge of who is responsible for the damage should contact Lieutenant Steve Baker at 378-7335.

A male individual was cited for driving his vehicle on the grass north of Budge Hall in Helaman Halls, causing $75 damage. The driver will be ordered to make full restitution.

Traffic Offense

On Monday a former student was observed driving a black Jeep on the sidewalks of Helaman Halls. The investigation disclosed that the vehicle was being operated illegally since the driver had a suspended license, expired vehicle registration and no proof of insurance. The vehicle was impounded by the state and the driver has been permanently banned from BYU properties.

Disruptive Conduct

A male resident of Helaman Halls was issued a $200 violation of University Policy on Tuesday. The student refused to identify himself after he was approached by officers for in-line skating on campus.

A disabled male visitor was banned from campus Tuesday for allegedly engaging himself in objectionable behavior. Several female students have reported that the man approached them, asked inappropriate questions, solicited their phone numbers and asked for a hug at the end of the conversation.

Thefts

After utilizing five different students' telephone billing cards, a former male student was arrested from Helaman Halls April 4. The male individual has been charged in court and was ordered to make full restitution.

Unidentified individuals stole nine BYU baseball jerseys, valued at $360, from the Smith Fieldhouse April 4. Individuals with any knowledge regarding the suspects have been asked to contact Investigator Rhoades at 378-5215.

A $1,500 G.T. Panthera bicycle was stolen after the owner left it unattended for a few minutes. When the owner returned he noticed a male riding it and pursued the subject in a chase until he recovered the bike in the area of the Glenwood apartments. Investigation of the case is continuing.

A female student reported that her wedding ring was stolen from the JKHB auditorium. The victim had removed the ring while she played the piano and inadvertently forgot to put it back on. The ring originally belonged to the student's grandmother. Investigator Rhoades would appreciate individuals with any knowledge as to the whereabouts of the ring to call him.

Garrens to present year's best sketches

By KIMBER KAY
Universe Staff Writer

Sketches selected from this semester's performances. The shows will be Friday at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. in the J. Reuben Clark Law Building. All tickets are $5.

The Troupe is made up of past and present BYU students. They started out with sketches based on BYU and Mormon humor, but have moved into more general material.

Cast member Randy Tayler explained the change. "We tried to move away from BYU humor because we are not just performing for BYU students anymore. We want to perform stuff that everyone can relate to. If it is funny and clean, we will do it."

The Garrens perform sketches, not skits, because "sketches are more professional," said cast member Marc Shaw. "Boy Scouts do skits, Garrens do sketches."

The show includes a sketch relating the thoughts of a mateless engineering major desperate to sit next to the only girl in class, and a cheesy parody of a Micheal McLean song.

Everyday events take on Twilight Zone characteristics as an innocent Little Caesar's pizza becomes "an evil yet delicious weapon of terror," and an obnoxious speeder is pulled over by a sadistic police officer.

Miscellaneous sketches include an international fun run for peace that goes awry, a medieval blacksmith that vows to stop making weapons of war, and a family of "Star Wars" fans who face a crisis of epic proportions.

Improvisations will take up about 30 percent of the show, said cast member Lincoln Hoppe.

The Garrens will be holding auditions for ten actors. They will have workshops during the summer, and these actors will move up into the Garrens when they are perfected. Auditions will take place Wednesday from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. in B-201 HFAC. For more information, call the Garrens hot line at 379-8888.

raising money for the hospital."

This is his third annual benefit concert. At the performance Cimarusti, who has an Italian heritage, will play several classical Italian pieces.

"Dick, he was a one-of-a-kind in the 1950s. He made a thousand when it was a big deal. He still plays, and I consider him one of the greatest accordion players," Cimarusti said.

The first part of the program will be a presentation on the City of Hope, with information about cancer; the concert will directly follow. Beverages will be served. The concert will begin at 7 p.m. in the Garden Court of the ELWC building. Tickets cost $6. For information call 371-3121 or pick up tickets at 327 ELWC or at the HFAC music box office.

Show marks end of era for Sofa

By TERI L. BROWN
Universe Staff Writer

By the time spring weather arrives, local band Sofa will be gone.

Sofa will be playing their final show Saturday at the Soul Kitchen with new local band Star Motel.

Sofa started with its original line up in February 1994. After three years and some personnel changes, original lead singer Darin Hazen is ready to do something different, said saxophone player and percussionist Chris Watson.

"Everyone is really serious about making a career out of it and I'm not anymore. I'm going to concentrate on school and maybe a business for myself," said Hazen, a senior from Layton, majoring in graphic design.

"I'd like it if I could just skip all the time and the touring and make it big and be famous," Hazen said.

Through the three years together and the personnel changes, Sofa has accomplished a lot and reigned successful.

Just the fact that they have stayed together for this long is an accomplishment, Watson said. Bands are continually coming and going in Provo.

In March 1995, after many dedicated hours of time and energy, Sofa released their first CD, "Arcana." Sofa is now working on recording a second CD, as yet untitled.

Hazen said this CD is for themselves. In case they do completely break up, they will have their music documented.

"It was great to break out of Provo," Watson said. "Looking back, all the long hours of work were worth it. What it comes down to is that we love the music and enjoy playing and performing for people."

The upbeat, funky and catchy tunes were something people could identify with. Sofa uses different instruments in a funky way.

"People expect a horn section in a ska show, but not in a funky music shows like ours," Watson said.

Hazen puts on a show for the audience rather than just standing and singing.

"He's got great stage presence. He's able to get the crowd into the music — songs you wouldn't think are danceable become danceable. He jumps around like a crazy monkey," said Sofa fan Derek Freeman, a senior from Falls Church, Va., majoring in business.

Sofa may continue after they lose Hazen, but under a new name and with a new sound.

"It really depends on if we can find someone with the right chemistry and style. No definite plans have been made — we really aren't sure," Watson said.

"We know we aren't always going to have great audiences or perfect stage setups," Watson said. "We play because we love the music and it's a great creative outlet for us all."

Sofa is playing their farewell show Saturday at the Soul Kitchen at 8:30 p.m. with Star Motel. Tickets are $3 and CDs will be for sale.

Cougarettes claim Grand Championship

By STEPHANIE HALE DULLUM
Universe Sports Writer

The Cougarettes won the National Cheerleading Association Grand Championship in Daytona Beach, Fla. on April 4.

Jodi Maxfield, the BYU Cougarette advisor, said that this win is as big for the Cougarettes as winning the NCAA tournament would be for other sports.

The competition will be nationally rebroadcast on CBS April 20 at noon. The Cougarettes had to go through two preliminary rounds to get to the final. According to Cougarette President, Amy Walker, the first preliminary is a video tape that the team sends. The team sent in a tape of one of their half-time performances.

After the Cougarettes were admitted into the competition, they competed in a preliminary round on April 3. After that preliminary round the Cougarettes were ranked No. 1 out of 20 teams.

According to Maxfield, the top ten teams were admitted into the finals. The teams performed in order based on their rank after the preliminaries. Because BYU was ranked No. 1, they had to perform last.

"It added pressure to have to wait for all the other teams to perform first," Maxfield said.

The Cougarettes won with a score of 8.664. University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill came in a distant second with a score of 8.168.

The routines were required to contain three different dance forms: funk, jazz and pom.

Walker said that the Cougarettes' strong point is their technique.

According to Maxfield, the technique of the Cougarettes is what made the difference in the scores.

"The judges appreciated the fact that the Cougarettes are very well trained," Maxfield said.

Maxfield said that technique is a big consideration in tryouts. Once a dancer makes the Cougarettes, she is required to continue her technical training by taking at least one dance technique class each semester that she is performing for the Cougarettes.

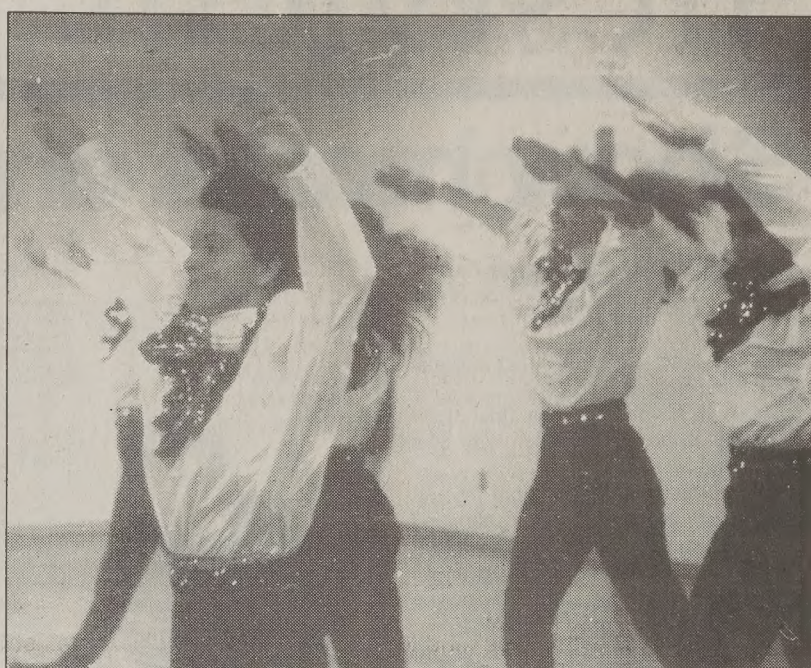

According to Maxfield, the strongest point for the Cougarettes is their turns. Maxfield said a lot of teams feature a couple girls to do turns, but the Cougarettes have all 16 girls doing turns in unison.

"At the end of the routine, the turns had the crowd on their feet," Maxfield said.

In addition to scoring each team on the three different dance styles, choreography and overall crowd appeal are also scored.

The crowd's enthusiasm for the BYU team helped them achieve the win.

The funk section of the dance was the hardest part for the Cougarettes to perform. According to Marci Harker, Cougarette historian, and Maxfield, funk is not the Cougarettes' focus.

"The funky part was definitely the hardest because it's not something that we do," Harker said.

Maxfield said, "We're not about funk. Some of the squads we competed against specialize in that."

According to Walker, BYU stood out because of the standards the team to follow. Walker said that the Cougarettes were the only team not wearing a costume that showed the stomach. She also said that the Cougarettes tried to stay away from the vulgar movements that some of the other teams performed.

The team won championship jackets, trophies and a $1500 gift certificate for the team to use to buy costumes and such.

"The recognition is the biggest thing we won," Walker said.

Cougars ready for sweet rematch with Antelope

By CHRIS BLUTH
Universe Sports Writer

Coming off a doubleheader sweep over the University of New Mexico last weekend, the Cougar baseball squad looks to improve its home record today, beginning a three-game series with Grand Canyon University at Cougar Field.

The Cougars crushed the Antelopes earlier in the season, sweeping three games in Phoenix by scores of 19-8, 14-6, and 15-1.

"Our team dominated in hitting, pitching, and playing great defense," BYU head coach Gary Pullins said. "Grand Canyon is not a bad team, we just neutralized everything they tried to do the last time we met."

Pullins is pleased with the way his team is progressing. After last week's victories against New Mexico, he feels his team is ready to meet Grand Canyon in the rematch.

"To lose last Friday against New Mexico was devastating, but I was happy to see us bounce back," Pullins said. "We needed to win and we did; our guys reached deep down to pull off the wins."

BYU's hottest hitters are D.G. Nelson, leading the team with a 10-game hitting streak, followed by Glen Spencer at nine, and Troy Farnsworth and David Decker at six. Decker, who was ranked No. 39 in the NCAA batting statistics at .466 has improved to .455.

"He's hot, and has been hitting very well," Pullins said.

With last week's win the Cougars raised their team batting average to .355 to .367 in WAC games.

The Cougars are now 20-9 and 11-4 in the WAC, good for second place in the conference's Northern Division. Grand Canyon's record is 11-23 overall and 3-11 in the WAC.

"If we play as well as we did the last time we met Grand Canyon in Phoenix, we feel we are in position," Pullins said.

Micah Mangrum will start mound for BYU in game one of the series. It will be his second start of the season.

"He is an outstanding pitcher," Pullins said. "He had some injuries last year, but he is healthy and is 1-0 this year. We are ready to get into our starting position."

Saturday's pitchers will be Bloomfield and Jeff Bloomfield holds a 4-1 record in his last three games.

Stone was sixth in the NCAA pitching victories before another win to make his record at 8-0.

"Closing out the series with Grand Canyon is huge for us. They are playing well right now and not only playing them, but battling them."

Friday's game will begin at 7 p.m. with Saturday's doubleheader beginning at noon. KSSR Radio 14 will broadcast Friday's game and the first game on Saturday.

Lacrosse looks to maintain focus against Fort Lewis

By STEPHEN GORDON
Universe Sports Writer

After a two week layoff, the men's lacrosse team resumes play tonight against Fort Lewis of Colorado.

Face-off is scheduled for 7 p.m. at Haws Field. Having reached their goals set at the start of the year — a league championship in the Rocky Mountain Intercollegiate League and an invitation to May's national lacrosse club championship in St. Louis — the objective is to maintain focus.

"We need to be sharp," head coach Jason Lamb said about his team, coming into their game against Fort Lewis. "We can't let down our level of play based on our opponent."

Fort Lewis, a developing program, is new to the lacrosse scene. The Cougars, knowing this, are cautiously approaching tonight's match, aware that they can't let their guard down.

"We've had great practices, and all the players are a little more intense," Lamb said.

The intensity was at its peak in their previous game, a 20-3 route of Stanford University on March 28. After giving up the first goal of the game, the Cougar arsenal came out storming, and racked up 14 unanswered goals to lead at halftime, 14-1. Stanford never recovered.

In a March 26 game against UC Davis, the Cougars overcame erratic play to take charge in the second half, retaking the lead for good in the fourth quarter to win 14-11.

The team's record stands at 7-2 overall, thanks in part to a current winning streak of six games. In those six games, the Cougars have outscored their opponents 94-40. The offensive attack is

Men's tennis team stuns Tulsa, 4-3

By STEPHANIE HALE DULLUM
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU men's tennis team upset No. 28-ranked Tulsa Thursday, 4-3.

BYU is ranked No. 70. Head Coach Jim Osborne said this win will really help as the team prepares for the WAC Championships.

BYU has come off of their doubles winning streak. Osborne said doubles are tricky because once the team breaks, it's hard to get back into the match.

BYU lost the first and second doubles matches 8-5. The freshman team of Damien Ward and Dann Battistone won their doubles match 8-6.

"We actually had a lot of chances to go ahead early, but we didn't break until the last game to win the match," Battistone said. "We've ended our losing streak and are back on a roll."

"I'd rather lose the doubles and win the singles," Osborne said. That is exactly what happened.

Boris Bosnjakovic won the first singles match 6-4, 6-3.

According to Osborne, Tulsa changed their line up for this match. They had their No. 1 singles playing No. 2.

Manuel Calvo upset Tulsa's No. 46-ranked player. Calvo lost a disappointing first set 6-1 but made a strong comeback to win the set 1-6, 7-6, 6-2.

"That guy was on fire. I just waited for him to cool off," Calvo said.

Calvo said the difference came when he changed his strategy and started playing from the back.

Battistone was defeated at the No. 3 6-3, 6-2. Battistone said he played fine, but he was just up against a tough player. "There were no mental let downs. I just lost," Battistone said.

BYU was also defeated at the No. 4 singles slot. Ward barely lost 6-4, 1-6, 4-6.

"I got broken early after being up 40-love on my serve, (and) that sort of put a dent in that set for me," Ward said.

Brad McIntosh won easily in the No. 5 singles match, 6-0, 6-2.

Rosander was able to perform well under the pressure and close out the match for BYU. Rosander defeated Gupta 6-3, 6-4.

"We're just getting more and more match-tough towards the end of the season. We have no real weaknesses at any position," Osborne said.

Osborne said, "Our seniors really came through." Bosnjakovic and Rosander, the two seniors on the team, both achieved impressive wins.

Osborne said the team has been working especially hard on singles and it is starting to payoff.

The Cougars take to the courts again Saturday at 1:30 p.m. against the University of Nevada at Las Vegas.

UNLV will be a tough team to beat, Osborne said. UNLV has recently beaten highly-ranked Fresno State.

Osborne said UNLV is the WAC team to beat.

"I know they'll be tough, but we need to go out there and do the stuff we know," Calvo said.

Line-Item Veto Act struck down

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a decision affecting federal spending and the balance of governmental power, a judge on Thursday struck down as unconstitutional a law that lets the president veto specific items out of bills passed by Congress.

The 37-page ruling by U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson overturns the Line-Item Veto Act. The law was passed by Congress a year ago and became effective Jan. 1, but President Clinton has never exercised it.

The law allowed the president, for the first time, to veto particular items in spending bills and certain limited tax provisions passed by Congress. Previously, the president could only veto entire bills.

Jackson said the law flatly contradicts basic tenets of the Constitution.

"Where the president signs a bill but then purports to cancel parts of it, he exceeds his constitutional authority and prevents both Houses of Congress from participating in the exercise of lawmaking authority," Jackson wrote.

"Never before has Congress attempted to give away the power to shape the content of a statute of the United States, as the act purports to do The formalities of the constitutional framework must be respected."

The Clinton administration has asked the court to throw out the challenge by six members of Congress. The lawmakers, led by the senior Senate Democrat Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., argued the law was an unconstitutional encroachment of Congress' legislative power.

"I am very pleased with the court's decision, which I believe to be a great victory for the American people and our Constitution," Byrd said in a statement.

The administration had contended that the lawmakers lacked standing to sue "because they have not alleged personal injury in fact, which has been or necessarily will be inflicted on them ... and which is redressable by judicial decree."

"We're disappointed of course, but we won't have any further comment until the Justice Department has an opportunity to read the decision," said White House spokesman Barry Toiv.

But supporters of the law were quick to urge Clinton to appeal Jackson's ruling, predicting the issued will eventually be decided by the Supreme Court. Jackson, himself, agreed it "undoubtedly" will.

"...While no other branch of government can usurp Congress' authority, the Congress itself can delegate that authority," Republican Sen. John McCain of Arizona and Dan Coats of Indiana said in a joint statement. "There are clear precedents in tax and tariff law."

Clinton wanted the law to block excessive spending and special-interest tax breaks that lawmakers sometimes include in bills.

"...The court agrees with plaintiffs that, even if Congress may sometimes delegate authority to impound funds, it may not confer the power permanently to rescind an appropriation or tax benefit that has become the law of the United States," Jackson wrote.
